Wells, Nevada, is a small but strategically positioned community in Elko County, located in northeastern Nevada along the Interstate 80 corridor. Historically rooted in railroad, mining, and ranching activity, Wells has long served as a vital stopover point for travelers and commerce moving across the western United States.

With a population of approximately 1,200 residents, Wells offers a quiet, small-town environment while benefiting from consistent transient traffic generated by I-80—one of the nation’s primary east–west transportation routes. The city supports a steady hospitality and service economy driven by interstate travelers, truck drivers, outdoor enthusiasts, and regional visitors. Nearby access to hunting, fishing, and outdoor recreation, combined with proximity to Elko’s mining operations and regional services, positions Wells as a functional and dependable market for hospitality and traveler-oriented commercial uses.

Strategically located along the Interstate 80 corridor, the property provides convenient access to Wells' key recreational and visitor destinations that support steady transient lodging demand. Guests benefit from proximity to outdoor recreation, local amenities, and traveler-oriented stops that make Wells a natural pause point for regional and cross-country travel. The area attracts outdoor enthusiasts, RV travelers, and interstate motorists seeking nearby alpine lakes, public recreation facilities, and small-town conveniences. Combined with limited hospitality supply in the immediate market, the property's location supports consistent visibility and accessibility for short-term and overnight stays.
