550 WATER ST • SANTA CRUZ, CA

The 550 Water Street complex in Santa Cruz, California, was designed in 1962 by Aaron Green & developed by Bogard Construction. This prominent professional and medical plaza reflects Green's commitment to organic architecture, a design philosophy championed by his mentor Frank Lloyd Wright. Following Wright's death in 1959, Green played a significant role in completing projects that Wright designed, including the Marin County Civic Center, one of Wright's final major works.
