CHANDLER LEASING TRENDS & DEMOGRAPHICS

Chandler has emerged as one of Phoenix's fastest-growing employment hubs in the past decade. The submarket has been targeted for office relocations and expansions due to the East Valley's talented labor pool and the submarket's new office inventory.

Elevated construction had put upward pressure on vacancies in 2020-21, but modest levels of absorption and surging sublease availabilities have been the main culprits since. New supply will likely be minimal in the near term, but the glut of sublease space that is currently on the market will make it difficult for fundamentals to meaningfully improve until office demand reengages.

The pace of transaction activity has downshifted over the past 12 to 18 months as elevated interest rates and broad-based economic uncertainty hamper deal flow. Approximately $25.6 million has traded in the submarket's office sector in the past year. Deals involving a tenant, either through a sale-leaseback or owner/occupancy, have become one of the primary sources of transactions.
