Greenbrier is a fast-growing community in Faulkner County, strategically positioned north of Conway and within the Little Rock–North Little Rock–Conway MSA. With a population of approximately 6,500 residents and steady year-over-year growth, Greenbrier has emerged as one of Central Arkansas’ most desirable small towns, known for its strong schools, family-friendly atmosphere, and expanding local economy.

The city benefits from its proximity to Conway, home to multiple universities, major employers, and national retailers. Greenbrier has seen a notable influx of new businesses, including retail, service, and restaurant users, driven by new residential developments and demand for neighborhood-serving amenities.

Economically, Greenbrier is supported by a diverse employment base tied to education, healthcare, construction, logistics, and small business entrepreneurship. Ongoing infrastructure improvements and thoughtful planning have positioned the city for continued sustainable growth, attracting both local and regional investment. Tourism and local activity are supported by outdoor recreation, nearby parks, community events, and easy access to the amenities of Conway and the greater Central Arkansas region.
