TRADE AREA OVERVIEW

The US-23 and Torque Drive corridor is located just north of downtown Columbus and The Ohio State University, placing it within one of the city's most active and well-connected trade areas. This prime location offers convenient access to I-71, SR-315, and I-270, providing direct routes to the urban core, surrounding suburbs, and the greater Central Ohio region.

The nearby Ohio State University serves as a major economic anchor, supporting a large student, faculty, and medical population that fuels consistent demand for retail, dining, and services. The area also benefits from proximity to OhioHealth Riverside Methodist Hospital, one of the region's largest healthcare facilities, and numerous corporate campuses and research centers.

Surrounding neighborhoods combine a mix of established residential communities, growing multifamily developments, and active commercial corridors. Retail and service businesses along High Street, US-23, and Bethel Road cater to a diverse customer base driven by students, medical professionals, and nearby residents.

With its central location, high traffic counts, and close proximity to both downtown Columbus and Ohio State University, the US-23 and Torque Drive area represents a strong and stable trade area positioned for continued commercial growth and redevelopment opportunities.
