Location Overview

BAKERSFIELD, CALIFORNIA

Bakersfield, California, is a major city and the county seat of Kern County, located at the southern end of the San Joaquin Valley in the Central Valley region. Founded in the 1860s and incorporated in 1898, it has grown significantly to become the ninth-largest city in California and one of the fastest-growing among the state's top cities. As of early 2025 estimates from the California Department of Finance, the city's population stands at approximately 419,000 (with U.S. Census July 2024 estimate at 417,468 and projections for 2026 around 417,000–420,000), up from 403,455 in the 2020 Census, reflecting steady annual growth of about 0.7–1.2%. Spanning roughly 151 square miles at an elevation of 404 feet, Bakersfield serves as a key hub for agriculture—Kern County ranks among the nation's top producers of crops like almonds, grapes, citrus, and carrots—and energy production, particularly oil extraction and refining, which dominates the local economy alongside healthcare, manufacturing, and distribution. Known for its hot desert climate with extremely sunny conditions (over 190 clear days annually), very hot dry summers often exceeding 100°F, mild winters, low rainfall (about 6 inches per year), and occasional tule fog, the city is also culturally notable as the birthplace of the “Bakersfield Sound” in country music, pioneered by artists like Buck Owens and Merle Haggard, earning it the nickname “Nashville West.”
