With a population of nearly 158,000, Moncton CMA is the largest metropolitan area in New Brunswick and the second largest CMA in the Maritime Provinces (after Halifax). Close to half of the population is bilingual. Between 2016-2021, Greater Moncton's population grew by an annual average of 8.9%. This growth has been largely driven by international immigration and a rural-urban shift in New Brunswick, as employment growth in urban centers has outpaced rural communities. Moncton is known as the "Hub City" as it is at the geographic center of the Maritime provinces. Greater Moncton has leveraged itself into becoming a leading distribution, logistic and retail center for New Brunswick, with a catchment area of 1.4 million people within a 2.5 hour drive.

The economy is largely driven by service and manufacturing industries as well as government and professional offices choosing Moncton as their headquarters. Greater Moncton is also home to two universities, two community colleges and four private colleges. There are over 13,500 students enrolled in post-secondary education programs, which results in 93 students for every 1,000 people living in the area.
