ABOUT PLAYA DEL REY

Conveniently located six miles north of LAX is an affluent beachside community in the Westside of Los Angeles — Playa del Rey, a small beach town consisting of 11,477 people with over 200 businesses. The community is bordered by the Pacific Ocean, Marina del Rey, Playa Vista, Westchester and El Segundo. Playa del Rey is considered a part of LA's "Silicon Beach", which also includes its neighboring cities of Playa Vista, Santa Monica, Venice Beach, Manhattan Beach, El Segundo, Marina del Rey, and Hermosa Beach. Like most of Los Angeles, Playa del Rey is filled with rolling hills. The elevation — so close to the shoreline — gives you a unique view of the Pacific Ocean on one side and mountains on the other.

Tech companies such as Google, Microsoft, Yahoo!, Facebook, and more are all minutes away. Referred to as the "sleeping giant which has been awakened by forces around the neighborhood," Playa del Rey has recently seen an increase in median sales prices.

Public schools include Paseo del Rey Fundamental and Westchester High School. Private schools include St. Bernard High School and nearby higher education includes Loyola Marymount and Otis College of Art & Design.

Playa del Rey is a favorable location for residents who like to eat, shop, walk, bike, hike and enjoy outdoor beach and recreational activities. Playa del Rey is home to Dockweiler State Beach, one of LA's most gorgeous and intimate beaches. People love coming here to host a bonfire at one of the fire pits, and get active on the Marvin Braude Bike Trail.
