MARKET ANALYSIS

Tooele's industrial market is becoming one of the more compelling growth stories in Utah, driven by a combination of population growth, transportation access, and expanding rail-served industrial capacity. Tooele City's own community profile reports a 3.10% annual growth rate, helping strengthen the long-term labor pool and local business demand.

The area already offers access to Interstate 80, Highway 36, freight rail, and regional air connections, while the Utah Inland Port Authority identifies the Tooele Valley project area as a unique industrial opportunity because of its adjacency to both rail and I-80.

In nearby Grantsville, Lakeview Business Park brings 800 rail-served acres to the market for manufacturing, distribution, research, and other industrial uses, with service tied into the Savage Tooele Railroad and Union Pacific network. Established operators such as Cabela's Distribution, Carvana, and Tooele Army Depot, along with Central States Manufacturing's expansion into Tooele City, add further depth to the market.

The broader Salt Lake industrial market maintained healthy leasing trends and resilient vacancy through 2025, Tooele appears well-positioned for continued industrial growth and long-term investor interest.

TOOELE, UT

Tooele offers a mix of wide-open Utah scenery, outdoor recreation, motorsports, and small-town history, all within an easy drive of Salt Lake City.

Tooele is one of the best base camps for Utah's West Desert and the Bonneville Salt Flats, with access to ATV trails, hiking, fishing, and other outdoor activities.

Tooele is also close to Great Salt Lake experiences, including viewpoints, boating access, and bird-watching at Great Salt Lake State Park. For visitors who like local culture, Tooele also has museums that highlight pioneer, railroad, mining, and firefighting history, and the area offers public star parties at the Stansbury Park Observatory.

Altogether, Tooele stands out as a destination where visitors can enjoy unique landscapes, family-friendly attractions, and hands-on experiences that feel distinctly Utah.
