MARKET OVERVIEW

Market Area and Property Characteristics

Property values in the vicinity of a subject property are influenced by numerous factors to include social, economic, governmental and environmental forces. The manner or degree to which these factors influence property values is often consistent with a geographic area. This area of influence is known as the market area within which the subject property is located.

The identification of a market area begins with the subject property and proceeds outward, to include all relevant, actual and potential influences on the property's value that can be attributed to its location. The geographical limits of the market area extend far enough to encompass all influences that the market perceives as affecting the value of the subject property.

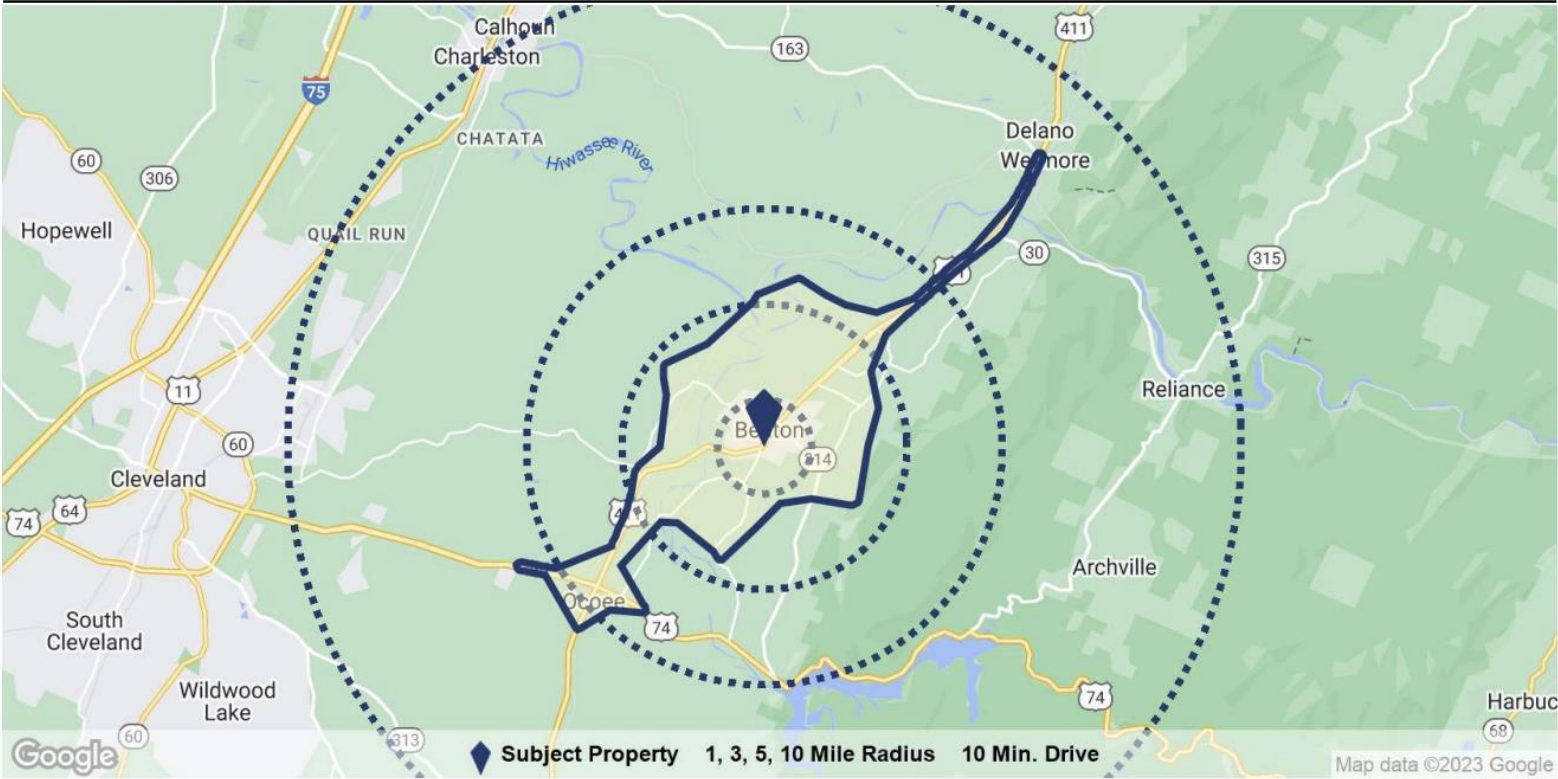

Analysis of the market area in which a particular property is located is important due to the fact that the various economic, social, political and physical forces which affect the market area also directly influence the individual properties within it. Market area analysis also provides a framework, or context, in which the opinion of property value is developed.
