Location Overview

The Central Beltline in Madison, Wisconsin is a major highway that runs east-west through the city, connecting the eastern and western suburbs. The highway starts at I-39/90 on the east side of Madison and ends at US Highway 12/18 on the west side.

The Central Beltline is a key transportation route for commuters and travelers, with heavy traffic during peak hours. It also provides access to several important destinations in the city, including the University of Wisconsin-Madison campus, the State Capitol, and several major shopping centers.

The property site is adjacent to the Southern Arboretum to the West and across the Beltline to the South of the UW Arboretum.
