WYOMING WATER RIGHTS & WHEATLAND IRRIGATION DISTRICT

In 1881, John Gordon’s vision set the stage for the Wheatland Irrigation District. From the construction of the Bluegrass Tunnel to the establishment of Wheatland Reservoirs No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3, the district has evolved into an irrigating powerhouse. With 11 reservoirs and 120 miles of canals, the Wheatland Irrigation District sustains 54,000 acres, proving itself a key player in Wyoming’s water management.

This property has 59.3 Acres of Wheatland Irrigation District water rights. The property is on the Morrison Ditch.
