Created in 1985, The Research Park at Florida Atlantic University provides a supportive environment in which companies engaged in research and development can thrive. The Research Park is a community where entrepreneurs, academics and service providers come together and develop a sense of identity as the Park incorporates and encourages collaboration.

The research park is the only state-university-affiliated research park in South Florida and is the premier Technology Business Incubator (TBI) in the region.

The university promotes innovation through FAU Tech Runway, a public-private partnership that serves as a hub to accelerate technology development and incubate startup companies. The 28,000-square-foot collaborative working space at the Research Park provides entrepreneurs with a complete ecosystem in which to scale their companies from ideation through to early revenue stage.

The university also supports Global Ventures at FAU, which offers entrepreneurial support to assist technology-based companies. Global Ventures at FAU offers flexible terms on private office and lab space, as well as shared conference rooms, central mail facilities and common areas, providing growing businesses the ability to grow and contract quickly as the need arises.

Many other essential resources necessary for the success of the Research Park's tenants can be found right next door at regionally-renowned NCAA Division-1, Florida Atlantic University.
