EAST IDAHO DEMOGRAPHICS

► Rexburg, Idaho:

Rexburg, Idaho, is a growing community with a bright future, making it a prime destination for real estate and business investment. Home to Brigham Young University Idaho (BYU-Idaho), which boasts an enrollment of over 20,000 students, Rexburg sees a steady influx of residents, visitors, and young professionals. With the city's population growing by nearly 3% annually, demand for both housing and services are on the rise. The area's affordable living, combined with its proximity to major recreational hotspots like Yellowstone National Park and the Grand Tetons, makes it an attractive destination for families and investors alike. Rexburg's continued development in commercial infrastructure and housing positions it as a key market in Eastern Idaho with long-term growth potential.

► Jefferson County, Madison County, and Fremont County:

The tri-county region of Jefferson, Madison, and Fremont counties in Eastern Idaho offers a wealth of opportunities for strategic investment. Madison County, home to Rexburg, has seen its population grow by over 6% in the past five years, spurred by the economic impact of BYU-Idaho. Jefferson County benefits from its prime location along U.S. Highway 20, with continued growth in both residential and commercial sectors. Fremont County, with its expansive outdoor attractions like Island Park and proximity to Yellowstone National Park, sees millions of visitors annually, making it an ideal location for tourism-based investments. Together, these counties are witnessing a surge in housing, retail, and service industries, offering a vibrant economic landscape with high potential returns for investors.

► Eastern Idaho (Pocatello to Jackson Hole/Yellowstone):

The stretch of Eastern Idaho, from Pocatello to Jackson Hole and Yellowstone National Park, is a dynamic region poised for growth in real estate and business development. With Yellowstone National Park attracting over 4 million visitors annually, and Jackson Hole's high-end tourism market driving demand for luxury developments, this corridor offers unmatched opportunities in the hospitality and residential sectors. Pocatello, with its 56,000+ residents, is home to Idaho State University, which generates a steady workforce and contributes to the local economy. Jackson Hole, on the other hand, continues to be a top destination for affluent buyers, with a 5% year-over-year increase in property values. From industry to tourism, this region's diverse economic base, coupled with its breathtaking natural surroundings, offers exceptional prospects for long-term growth and investment.
