1900 S. Navajo Street ▪ Denver, CO

NA Shames Makovsky

The Ruby Hill neighborhood is a community known for its spacious lots, mature trees, and proximity to outdoor recreation.

Transportation

This location is well-connected, with easy access to South Santa Fe Drive (US-85), making commuting to downtown Denver or the southern suburbs convenient. Public transit is also accessible, with nearby RTD bus routes and close proximity to the Evans and Broadway light rail stations, offering quick travel across the metro area.

Parks & Recreation

Nature lovers will enjoy being close to Ruby Hill Park, one of Denver's largest parks, featuring hiking and biking trails, a winter rail yard for snow sports, and the Levitt Pavilion, which hosts free outdoor concerts. The South Platte River Trail is also nearby, offering miles of scenic biking and walking paths that run through the city.

Amenities

The area boasts a variety of local eateries, grocery stores, and cafes within a short drive, and the nearby Overland and Platt Park neighborhoods offer additional dining and shopping options. Schools, libraries, and recreational centers are easily accessible, making it a family-friendly and community-focused place to live.
