Property Overview

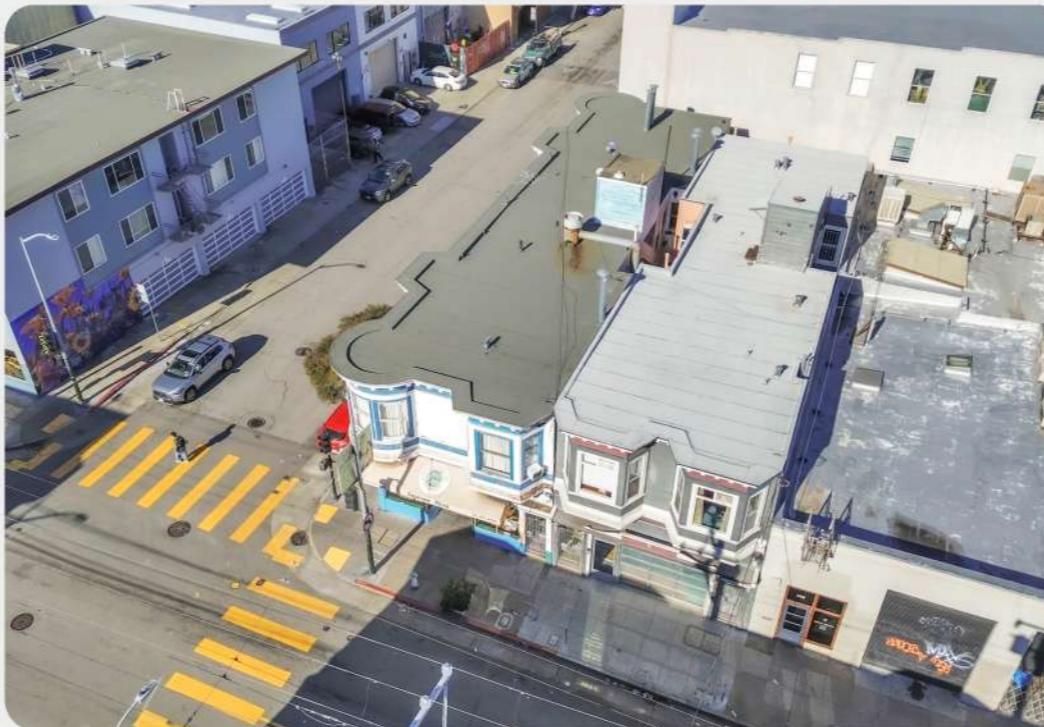

This mixed-use investment offering consists of two adjacent buildings with a diversified residential and commercial unit mix located in an established San Francisco neighborhood. The portfolio includes 3344–3348 18th Street and 291–293 Capp Street, providing a total of four income-producing units comprised of three residential units and one ground-floor retail space.

The property is offered at $1,650,000, reflecting an in-place cap rate of approximately 6.3% based on current operations. The cap rate calculation assumes actual in-place rents, a 5% vacancy allowance, and limited landlord-paid expenses including property taxes, insurance, water, and garbage. Property taxes are underwritten at an estimated 1.18% of value, and insurance is normalized to market coverage levels. No management fee or additional operating reserves are assumed in the cap rate, consistent with current ownership operations.

This offering is priced to reflect existing income, vintage construction, and current expense structure, presenting an attractive opportunity for investors seeking strong yield today with long-term upside through active ownership, expense optimization, and future rent growth. The mixed-use configuration provides income diversification and stability within a supply-constrained San Francisco submarket.

Income and expense information is provided for underwriting guidance only and should be independently verified by buyers. Property is offered as-is. Please do not disturb tenants.
