LOCATION OVERVIEW

Queen Creek anchors the fast-growing southeast edge of metro Phoenix, one of the region's most active suburban growth corridors. 21321 E Ocotillo Road places a practice in the heart of an affluent, family-dense, and notably under-served healthcare market — a location where demand is strong and well-funded, but local medical supply remains thin.

Within five miles, the trade area holds 190,624 residents growing roughly 1.9% per year (71,082 inside three miles, growing 2%+), overwhelmingly young families with a median age of 34–36 and 52,625 children. Incomes run well above average — an average household income of $174,150 within five miles and $202,752 within three miles — and these households spend well above the U.S. average on healthcare, with physician-services spending indexing 169 and dental 149 at three miles, on $671 million of annual healthcare spend within five miles.

Yet the submarket carries only about 15.6 health establishments per 10,000 residents, against a U.S. norm of 25–30. The result is a compelling setup for an incoming provider: high, well-funded demand meeting limited local supply, in a community still building out its medical infrastructure.
