Jackson Square:

Jackson Square was once part of San Francisco's Barbary Coast, and has now evolved into a hub for high-end design firms, venture capital firms, family offices, and upscale retailers. It is the most sought-after office market in the entire San Francisco area. The neighborhood features brick and timber buildings, cobblestone streets, and a historic charm. It is home to some of the city's top restaurants and cafes, including Cotogna and Kokkari Estiatorio. Jackson Square is well-positioned between the Financial District, North Beach, and the Embarcadero.
