LOCATION OVERVIEW

Visalia, CA.

Property Overview

Map

Visalia, CA.

Visalia stands as the 42nd largest city in California with a population of approx. 145,000± making it a significant mid-sized urban center in the heart of the San Joaquin Valley. Serving as the county seat of Tulare County and maintains a population density of 3,504± people per square mile. The city covers nearly 38 square miles and functions as the regional hub for commerce, healthcare, and education throughout the Central Valley. Visalia balances small-town character with metropolitan amenities, offering affordable living costs compared to coastal California while maintaining strong economic growth and serving as the gateway to Sequoia and Kings Canyon National Parks. This combination makes Visalia an increasingly attractive destination for families, businesses, and investors seeking California's Central Valley advantages.

Visalia is experiencing unprecedented economic growth that's capturing national attention, with retail expansion more than doubling the national average at 8.1% between 2020 and 2024, ranking 27th among midsize U.S. metropolitan areas. The city's success stems from its strategic position as the metropolitan center for Tulare/Kings and southern Fresno County, drawing customers from a much larger trade area(s). The city's focused approach to economic diversification and strategic partnerships with quality developers positions Visalia as a premier location for businesses seeking access to California's Central Valley market while maintaining competitive operational costs and benefiting from proven sustainable growth patterns.
