

ABOUT

Gardner's Wharf Seafood is a retail seafood market and wholesale shellfish processing station. Narragansett Bay Shell Fisherman deliver their catch every day to Gardner's Wharf, where it is processed and trucked to distributors, fish markets and restaurants up and down the east coast and as far west as Denver, Colorado.

This wharf at the end of Main Street has been the site of a commercial fishing dock and retail fish market since the 1800s. A shack called Bellmore's Chowder Bowl operated here from about 1939 to about 1954.

Our present location, bearing our business name, at historic Gardner's Wharf in Wickford, Rhode Island has been primarily a seafood market and shellfish processing station for over 70 years. Gardner's Wharf Seafood is ready and eager to serve your fresh seafood needs.

Proud of the longstanding tie between Gardner's Wharf in Wickford, RI and Narragansett Bay, Gardner's Wharf Seafood provides one of the few places left in Rhode Island for fishermen to sell their product and to dock their boats.

The following photos depict the changes and different views of longstanding Gardner's Wharf and its use as a seafood market and shellfish processing station over the years.

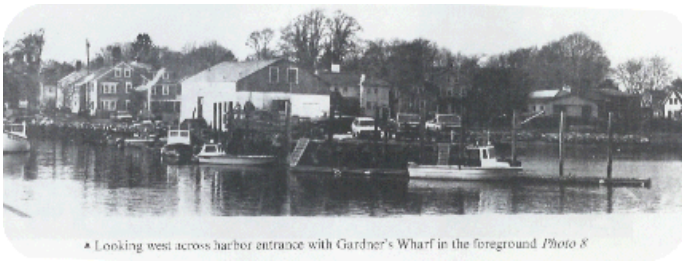

Figure B7
c) 1939 to 1954. Photo taken about 1940.

FISH DOCK AT THE END OF MAIN STREET, WICKFORD, R. I.

Figure 85
The end of Quaker's "Shed" during the 1920's. Note the Model Tour

Figure B3
The path of Gardner's $\hat{\rho}_{\text{Gardner}}$ during the DDE. Note the Model Turn

Fish Dock at the End of Main Street,
Wickford, RI

▲ Looking west across harbor entrance with Gardner's Wharf in the foreground Photo 8

Looking west across harbor entrance with Gardner's Wharf in the foreground

Drawing of Gardner's Wharf Seafood

Gardner's Wharf Seafood is proud of its place in the fishing industry, its contribution to the Rhode Island economy, and in keeping Wickford's and Rhode Island's fishing history alive today at historic Gardner's Wharf.