Coats
a peaceful place... a friendly face

The Town of Coats was chartered in 1905 and began with 700 acres of farming land and a general store owned by James T. Coats. Coats is home to North Carolina's first licensed aviator, Alton Stewart, who developed his interest in flying at Camp Bragg's Pope Field, during World War I. The Town of Coats is a town made up of individuals who have lived here for generations and many newcomers who find it home.

The Town of Coats' location can't be beat. Residents enjoy the culture, sports, and shopping of our own community and the surrounding communities. Plus, if you want to enjoy the amenities of bigger cities, they are not so far away. Coats is less than 30 miles' distance from Raleigh and the world-famous Research Triangle Park. Only a short drive away are 13 colleges and universities.

Two major highways are easily accessible from town- Interstates 40 and 95, just down the road, can put you on your way to the beaches and points south, or on the path to Washington, DC, and points north.

Whether single or married, with children or without, you can rest assured that in Coats you will find great neighbors and a community you'll want to call "home."
