Starbucks is now the second-biggest restaurant on Earth

March 15, 2024

The U.S. may feel at times like the fast food capital of the world, but the global scale of these businesses is downright mind-blowing. The top restaurant chains are always in competition to get into more stomachs worldwide, and Restaurant Business reports that Starbucks just pushed past Subway to become the second largest restaurant chain on earth.

According to data from Technomic, Starbucks added 3,000 new locations to its system in 2023, which brought its total number of locations globally to 38,587. This was enough for the coffee chain to edge out over Subway by about 2,000 units; the sandwich chain has 36,516 locations globally. Above both these chains sits McDonald's, with 41,882 locations throughout the world (roughly one-third of which are in the U.S.).

Although Subway was just knocked down to bronze on a global scale, the sandwich chain has held the top spot as the chain with the most locations in the U.S. for some time now. As of 2022, Starbucks and McDonald's had around 15,000 and 13,000 locations nationwide, respectively. At the same time, Subway operated approximately 20,000 stores, even after a 2.7% loss of units that year.

North Carolina set to become 7th-most populated state by early 2030s

August 26, 2024

North Carolina is set to become the seventh-most populated state in the country by the early 2030s, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

Davidson County Schools is trying to get ahead of that growth. Superintendent Dr. Gregg Slate said the supply chain for businesses in and around the Piedmont Raid runs through Davidson County, making it an attractive place to live.

Slate said there are more than 3,000 housing units being built across the county, which means more students.

The school system hired a demographer from North Carolina State University to study where the pockets of growth are, and which schools will be impacted.

Visitor Spending Tops the Billion Dollar Mark in Forsyth County

August 14, 2024

Visitors to Forsyth County spent $1.05 billion in 2023, an increase of 6.9% from 2022. Visitor spending generated $72.6 million in state and local taxes and supported 6,753 jobs.

Forsyth County ranks ninth statewide and, in 1983, was among the first five counties in North Carolina to adopt a special tax on visitor accommodations to invest in promoting the area for tourism. Stephanie Pace Brown, president of Visit Winston-Salem, explains how tourism promotion benefits the local community.

"Visit Winston-Salem implements sales and marketing strategies that motivate meetings, groups, sporting events and leisure travelers to choose Forsyth County," said Brown. "These efforts create economic vitality by enhancing the customer base for our local businesses, supporting jobs, and generating taxes — all for the benefit of the people who live here."
