STATESBORO

Education

Statesboro is supported by a strong higher education presence, including Georgia Southern University, Ogeechee Technical College, and East Georgia State College, which collectively contribute to a well-educated and continuously replenished workforce. These institutions help drive key employment sectors in the region, including education, healthcare, manufacturing, and retail trade. As a result, Bulloch County benefits from a diverse labor pool with a steady pipeline of graduates, supporting both existing employers and future economic growth.

Visitors & Tourism

126M + annual visitor spending in Bulloch County
Tourism ranks as a top local industry and major economic driver

Visitor Volume Drivers

University-related travel is the primary demand generator
163,000+ annual visitors tied to Georgia Southern alone

Includes:

- Football games & athletics
- Graduation ceremonies
- Conferences & campus tours

Overnight vs Day Visitors

Majority of university-driven visitors:

- ~130,000+ overnight stays annually

Supports:

- Hotels
- Short-term rentals
- Restaurants & retail

Events & Seasonal Traffic

Football weekends bring tens of thousands of visitors per season

Additional demand from:

- Regional tournaments
- Festivals & local events
- Academic calendar cycles

Population

Statesboro has experienced steady population growth in recent years, supported in large part by the presence of Georgia Southern University and its expanding student, faculty, and staff base. The city maintains a population of approximately 33,000 residents, while the broader Bulloch County exceeds 80,000, reflecting consistent regional growth. This stable and growing population base is complemented by a youthful demographic profile and ongoing in-migration, supporting long-term demand for housing and local services.

Age Profile (Young, Rent-Friendly Market)

Statesboro features a notably young age profile, driven by the strong influence of Georgia Southern University. The median age in the city is significantly lower than national averages, with a large concentration of residents between 18 and 24 years old. This student-driven demographic is balanced by a stable base of working professionals and families across Bulloch County, creating a diverse and sustainable population mix that supports consistent housing demand across multiple segments. Strong renter base and turnover (ideal for student housing & multifamily).
