Located on the Kentucky – Tennessee state border between Hopkinsville and Clarksville, Fort Campbell Army Base is the most extensive army base in the country. The base is home to the 101st Airborne Division, the only air assault division globally, and the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment. Fort Campbell supports the fourth largest military population in the army, with a population of 202,890. The base population includes 30,656 active-duty members, 8,040 civilian employees, 51,740 family members, and 112,454 supported population. Fort Campbell occupies 106,700 acres between the two states.

Approximately 400 soldiers separate from the Army each month and over 44% of those soldiers would prefer to stay in the community if quality jobs are available. Over 70% of the soldiers' spouses would prefer to stay in the area provided they can find quality employment. The soldiers and their spouses are educated, many of them with advanced degrees and highly trained.
