The Gulch

The Gulch is a dynamic mixed-use, LEED-certified community in the heart of Nashville. A once-abandoned industrial area, it underwent an urban revitalization program in past years, and soon became the first LEED ND neighborhood in the South with a prime focus on connectivity, walkability and public transportation. Conveniently located on the southwest border of Nashville's CBD just two blocks from Music City Center, the vibrant urban development and redevelopment is home to the best in urban living, office, retail, restaurant, entertainment venues and hospitality. The neighborhood features an eclectic mix of local retailers and restaurants that embody Nashville's unique culture, as well as well-known national retailers. The Gulch experience is further enhanced by artwork, events and inventive ways to activate public spaces and build community.

Music Row

Developed in the 1950's, Nashville's historic Music Row district sits southwest of the Downtown area. Widely considered the heart of the city's music and entertainment industry, the tree-lined neighborhood includes segments of the north-south-oriented Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, and Nineteenth Avenues South, as well as Music Square West, Music Square East, Music Circle East, Music Circle South, Grand Avenue, Chet Atkins Place, and Roy Acuff Place. At the other end of Music Row, across Wedgewood Avenue, sits Belmont University campus, with Vanderbilt University also adjacent to the area. From beloved local dive bars with quirky character to Nashville artistic features, this neighborhood was rated one of "The Best Places to Live in the Nashville Area" in 2021.
