Prime West Adams Freestanding Industrial/Flex Building. Seller Motivated. Ideally positioned just east of Culver City's thriving Arts District, this freestanding corner-lot property offers exceptional visibility, accessibility, and creative appeal in the heart of Historic West Adams — one of Los Angeles' fastest-growing creative and cultural districts. The building features 16-foot ceilings and 100% HVAC coverage powered by 17 tons of high-efficiency equipment, creating a comfortable, fully climate-controlled environment. With its professionally soundproofed interior, modern open layout, and secure gated alley access, this space provides the versatility and function that owner-users and creative businesses demand. Formerly the studio of renowned chef Wolfgang Puck for over a decade, the property was later utilized for vinyl record manufacturing, underscoring its deep creative heritage and exceptional acoustic qualities. The interior has been meticulously designed for flexibility — making it ideal for film or video production, live music, podcasting, manufacturing, delivery, or secure storage of goods and collectibles. The West Adams—Culver City corridor has quickly become one of Los Angeles' most desirable creative and entertainment industry hubs, attracting film and television production studios, post-production companies, recording artists, and design firms seeking versatile, modern space near the city's core. This thriving submarket continues to expand as media, tech, and entertainment tenants relocate from Hollywood and Culver City to take advantage of its accessibility, creative energy, and adaptive reuse properties. The neighborhood is also recognized for its vibrant culinary scene, featuring some of LA's top-rated restaurants and cafés, including Alta Adams, Mizlala, Cento Pasta Bar, Highly Likely Café, Johnny's
