LORETTO HEIGHTS REDEVELOPMENT

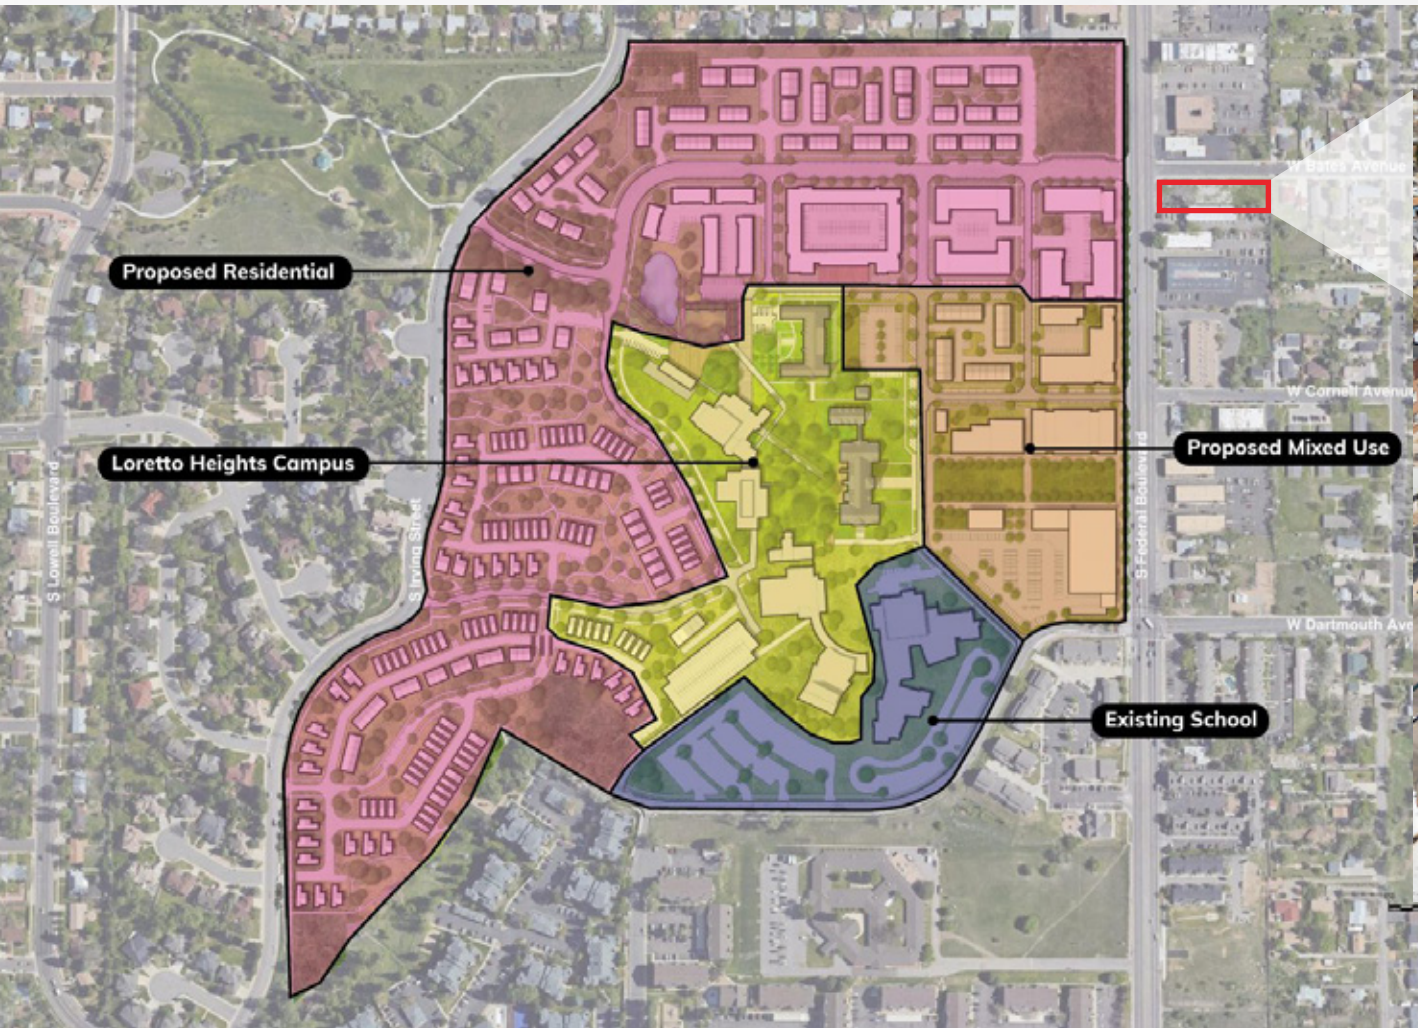

The 72-acre Loretto Heights campus has stood as a longtime landmark site visible from southwest Denver. Originally built as a Catholic women's college founded in 1891, Loretto Heights College closed in 1988 and the campus has remained mostly vacant for decades. New plans are now moving forward to redevelop and repurpose the iconic grounds into a vibrant mixed-use community.

Led by developer Westside Investment Partners in partnership with the City of Denver, plans call for a mixed-use neighborhood integrating for-sale and rental housing, retail, office, civic and cultural uses. The aim is to blend historic preservation of select original campus buildings alongside new residential and commercial construction. Early projections estimate over 1,000 housing units plus 150,000 square feet of retail/office space built out in targeted phases over 10-15 years.

Situated near major thoroughfares like Federal Blvd and Dartmouth Ave, Loretto Heights offers close proximity to dining, entertainment and employers. The development team is collaborating closely with surrounding neighborhoods and aims to retain public park spaces, walking trails and sweeping views of Denver's skyline.
