ABOUT FORTVILLE, INDIANA

Fortville is located in the northwest corner of Hancock County, Indiana immediately adjacent to neighboring Hamilton County, which forms the town's northwest boundary and Madison County, which borders to the north. It is approximately 25 miles northeast of Downtown Indianapolis, Indiana and is a part of the Indianapolis metropolitan area.

According to the 2010 census, Fortville has a total area of 2.91 square miles, of which 2.90 square miles is land and 0.01 square miles is water.

Despite occasional droughts throughout central Indiana, Fortville has a steady and reliable supply of water because it is situated over a natural aquifer.

Fortville was originally called Walpole, and under the latter name was laid out and platted in 1849. It was named for Cephas Fort, the original owner of the town site. Fortville was incorporated as a town in 1865.

The historic Browne-Rafert House on Merrill Street was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 2015.
