SAINT LOUIS ZOO EXPANSION

The St. Louis Zoo is a free attraction in St. Louis and home to more than 17,000 exotic animals, many of them rare and endangered. Three million people visit annually. In March 2018, the St. Louis Zoo bought a 425-acre complex in north St. Louis County for $7.1 million for an expansion. The zoo plans to use the land as part of its conservation efforts on threatened and endangered animals, including 250 acres dedicated to a Conservation & Animal Science Center – As of now, some types of animals that the Zoo plans to house here includes antelopes, gazelles, herps, amphibians, and reptiles. There will likely also be public components to the expansion as well, such as a safari park experience, educational experiences, wilderness adventures, nature play areas and “glamping.”

The St. Louis Zoo intends to still keep its current location in Forest Park operating in addition to the North County expansion. The Zoo recently constructed an $11.5-million outdoor expansion within their existing Forest Park location that houses primates. The St. Louis Zoo was voted America's top free attraction and best zoo in USA Today's 10Best Readers' Choice Awards.
