ABOUT HUNTINGTON PARK

This market is shaped by renter demand that is influenced by household size, daily-use retail, regional employment access, and the practical value of parking and transit connectivity. It has a compact city layout, with about 3 square miles of land area, which can support demand for functional apartment housing close to daily services.

For operators, parking, gated access, onsite laundry, and walkable access to shops, dining, and schools can help support tenant appeal in this type of dense rental market.

Huntington Park maintains a local rent stabilization ordinance. The city code states that covered rental units are subject to an annual rent cap of 3% per year or 100% of CPI for the Los Angeles-Long Beach-Anaheim region, whichever is lower, with rent increases limited to once during a 12-month period. Investors should confirm applicability, exemptions, registration rules, and rent history with counsel during due diligence.
