On June 15, 2021, Gallo announced it would build the new production facility and distribution center in Chester County, South Carolina, at a 650-acre rural site near Interstate 77 in the corridor between Charlotte, North Carolina, and Columbia, South Carolina.

The South Carolina operation provides bottling and canning capacity as well as warehousing and distribution for a growing portfolio of wine and spirits brands, taking advantage of the site's proximity to the Port of Charleston about 120 miles away and to its central location among the East Coast's network of interstates and railways.

The 1.5M square foot facility opened in Fall 2022 and recently announced a new line of production to the already robust list of offerings coming out of the Chester County location. The facility is expected to produce more than 12 million cases of vodka-based beverages. The five-year plan calls for six canning or bottle lines to roll out.
