BALDWIN PARK

Nestled in California's San Gabriel Valley approximately 10 miles east of downtown Los Angeles, Baldwin Park is a vibrant suburban city in Los Angeles County with a population of about 72,000 as of 2020. Originally part of the San Gabriel Mission's cattle grazing lands, the area was dubbed "Vineland" in 1860 before being renamed Baldwin Park in 1906 in honor of developer Elias J. "Lucky" Baldwin; it later incorporated as a city in 1956.

Famous as the site of California's very first In-N-Out Burger drive-thru, opened in 1948, its legacy continues with a company store and museum in the city today. The community is known for its cultural diversity, affordability, and suburban feel, with parks like Morgan Park, recreational events such as Summer Concerts in the Park, and a historic museum to showcase local heritage.
