The heart of the room is a PA system from California-based Meyer Sound, a company with a history of delivering a live music audiophile experience, speakers with exceptional clarity, frequency response, and dynamic range. Meyer Sound can be found in many of the world's top music spaces, including Royal Albert Hall in London and Walt Disney Concert Hall in Los Angeles.

The main full-range PA speakers are four of Meyer's Ultra X40, a loudspeaker which has earned numerous industry awards since its launch in 2019. Together with two of Meyer's 1100-LFC dual-18" subwoofers, AWE's sound system is capable of producing a frequency spectrum that covers the full range of human hearing, from 20Hz to 19.5kHz, loud and clear, distortion-free, and with even loudness and crystal-clear audibility everywhere in the audience. The loudspeakers can also be configured for quadraphonic sound to accommodate experimental music or surround sound media/playback.

The live music room at AWE is acoustically ideal, due to architectural features that give it similar sonic qualities to some of the world's greatest classical concert halls and music studios.

The warm wood framing of the room looks like the inside of an acoustic guitar, and the curves of its wave-shaped ceiling reflects sound energy and gradually changing angles, breaking up the floor-to-ceiling reflection that give square rooms a boxy tone. The cork-backed acoustically damped flooring helps absorb these "standing waves" as well.

The vertical wood strips along the walls, with offset thickness and depth, also create diffusion such as is found in high-end recording studios, removing the flutter and echo of high frequencies between the parallel walls.

This results in a live, open and natural sound response, warm sonic character, fullness and clarity wherever one stands in the audience.

THE STAGE

The newly built 20' wide x 14' deep performance stage at AWE was designed to enclose and focus the energy of the very powerful Meyer subwoofers, as well as to dampen vibration from stage floor to microphones, and is solid as concrete.

Featuring wood siding from the original Hollywood Bowl amphitheater benches, the stage's structure has joists spaced 2x as close as a traditional subfloor, with two layers of $\frac{3}{4}$ " plywood and acoustic glue, caulk, and sealant between all materials, damping pads, and a felt underlayment under the floating cork-backed floor for extra vibration isolation.

To prevent the stage cavity from resonance, we filled the entire structure with R30 rock-wool insulation.
