FIRST HAWAIIAN CENTER

999 Bishop Street, Honolulu, HI

First Hawaiian Center is Hawaii's premier Class A office complex located in the Central Business District of Honolulu. The building is an efficient, state-of-the-art headquarters for Hawaii's oldest bank; First Hawaiian Bank. First Hawaiian Center differentiates itself with high quality finishes throughout featuring granite, marble, stainless steel, glass/air conditioned exterior elevators, a fine line ceiling grid, and higher and more luxurious ceiling heights than any other building in Hawaii.

AN ARCHITECTURAL BREAKTHROUGH

First Hawaiian Center symbolizes Honolulu's modern commercial society. Views from the building capture panoramic scenes of Oahu and the Pacific Ocean. Architect William Pedersen of the New York firm of Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates designed the structure to fit into the unique setting that is Honolulu. It is triangular in shape, with a low "podium" along the Bishop and King Street faces with a "prow" on the Bishop Street side that is reminiscent of a sailing ship.

The colors and lines of the building evoke the mountains and the sea. The vertical patterns on the mauka side of the tower along King Street reflect the strong vertical influence of the Koolau Mountain Range. The tones on the makai side fronting Merchant Street and the sail-like "prow" along Bishop Street both acknowledge the nearby ocean. Unlike traditional high-rises, the "prow" gets larger as the building gets taller.

A DOWNTOWN PARK.

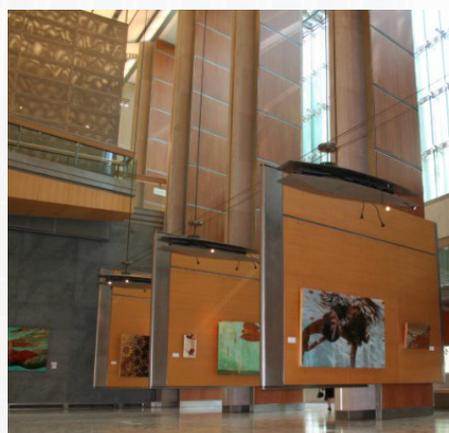

First Hawaiian Center provides new open space and greenery around the central intersection of Bishop and King Streets in Honolulu's Financial District. A total of 43% of the block – 24,000 square feet – is open plazas, landscaping and water features.

AN ART GALLERY.

The soaring, 44-foot-high banking hall of First Hawaiian Center features the downtown gallery of the Honolulu Museum of Art. It is a unique marriage of commerce and the arts, a showplace for the creative talents of Hawaii's people. The 90-foot sculptural glass wall and grand marble staircase lend a dramatic backdrop to the business of banking and the work of local artists displayed in the museum gallery.

A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE IN HAWAII

"This building says we believe in the future of our company, and we believe in Hawaii," said Walter A. Dods, Jr., retired Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of First Hawaiian Bank.
