CBRE

Concept Rendering of Courtyard. Completed 2024.

Built as an extension in 1928 to the original Copp Clark Publishing Company Complex, The Publishing House at 510 Front Street West features polished concrete floors, steel beams and expansive windows throughout. As one of the earliest industrial developments on the street, the building is historically, visually and physically linked to its setting on an expansive corner, where it can be viewed from Portland and Front Streets.

BUILDING FEATURES

HERITAGE

- Building exterior has gone through a comprehensive revitalization program to showcase original architectural features.
- 11 - 13 ft ceilings, with exposed brick, columns and concrete.
- Bright, open layouts with extensive natural light.

WELLINGTON PLACE

WELLINGTON PLACE is a great fit for the many affluent young professionals who populate the area. It's close to just about everything: the necessities, like hospitals and groceries, as well as the fun stuff, like bars and restaurants (it has the most per capita in the city).

Contributing to the area's explosive expansion is the Well, downtown's new residential and retail mega-complex, which has added more condos, shops, restaurants and gyms to an already robust mix.
