LOCATION OVERVIEW

Stockton, California

Stockton is an economically diverse city within Northern California, offering affordability and accessibility that attracts renters throughout the region. With a population exceeding 320,000 residents and strong ongoing household formation, the rental base continues to grow.

Hybrid workplace trends have further increased Stockton's appeal, allowing residents to commute into larger employment hubs while benefiting from more attainable housing. The city maintains a competitive cost of living compared to coastal markets and continues to experience consistent housing demand.

The multifamily market is supported by limited new development, a strong one bedroom renter pool, and long term upward pressure on rents. These characteristics create an attractive environment for owners focused on income growth and long term asset performance..
