Demographics

Long Beach is a charming city located within the Los Angeles County. As of 2020, it stands as the seventh-most populated city in California, holding a population of more than 460,000 residents. It is well-recognized for its beautiful waterfront landmarks, diverse crowds, historic nature and houses one of the world's largest shipping ports, the Port of Long Beach.

This coastal region offers locals and tourists ample opportunity for several deep-sea adventures, tours of local breweries, a vibrant dining and nightlife, as well as nearby vacation retreats. Because it is near the 5, 405 and 710 freeways, and Long Beach airport, Long Beach is a commuter's dream. Neighboring cities include Seal Beach, Carson, Lakewood, Torrance and Cypress.

With a robust economy, Long Beach delivers a solid workforce. Its top employer is the Long Beach Unified School District, retaining more than 12,000 employees. Other reputable businesses include Molina Healthcare, Long Beach City Hall, Denso Sales California, Inc., as well as Lineage Logistics and Westin Hotels & Resorts. There is a prominent construction, industrial and manufacturing presence in this beach town, with recent news announcing the opening of Relativity Space's new one million square-foot headquarters at the previously occupied Boeing facility.
