AREA OVERVIEW

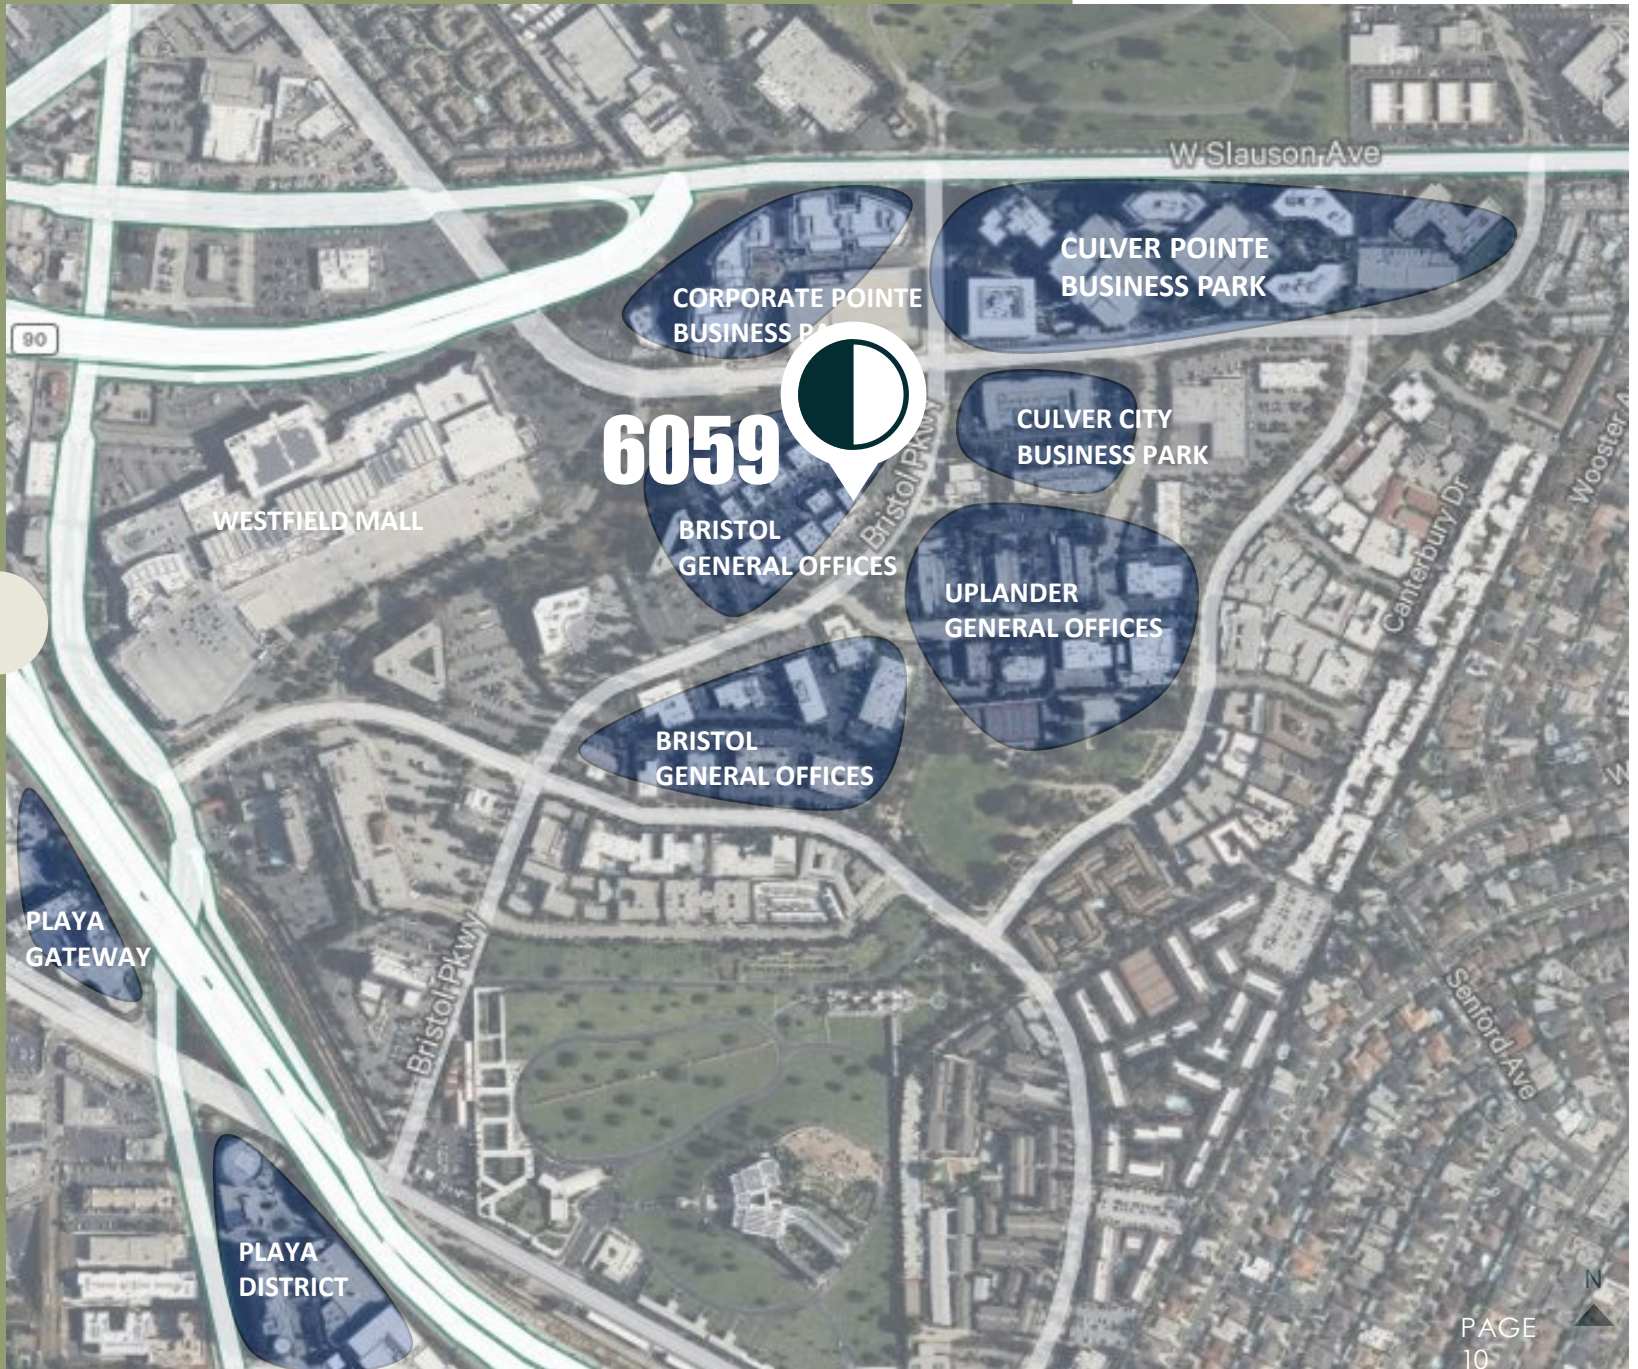

Culver City

Culver City offers a dynamic business environment and a high quality of life in a safe, modern community with convenient access to transit, shopping, dining, and entertainment. A historic center of motion picture and television production since the 1920s, Culver City is experiencing significant development. As of October 2024, approximately 230,000 square feet of new construction has been completed in the last 12 months, with an additional 320,000 square feet currently underway. The area has seen a healthy volume of commercial real estate transactions, particularly for small to mid-size properties, reflecting strong investor interest.

Culver City's strategic location allows employers to draw talent from across the Los Angeles area. The Metro Expo Line, which connects Culver City to Santa Monica and Downtown Los Angeles, is a major factor attracting businesses to the area. The tenant roster is dominated by tech and creative firms, including Amazon, Apple, Oracle, Symantec and TikTok. A significant portion of the office space in Culver City consists of repurposed industrial buildings and purpose-built creative office spaces, reflecting the evolving needs of modern businesses.
