LOCATION OVERVIEW

Ripley is where small-town charm meets strategic positioning in one of West Virginia's most accessible and steadily growing corridors. Located along Interstate 77 between Charleston (38 miles) and Parkersburg (35 miles), Ripley benefits from strong regional connectivity while maintaining a tight-knit community atmosphere. As the county seat of Jackson County, the city serves as a central hub for commerce, healthcare, and local government, making it an ideal location for long-term investment. With a cost of living below national averages and a business-friendly environment, Ripley continues to attract both residents and employers seeking stability and growth.

The employment landscape in Ripley and the surrounding region is anchored by a diverse mix of manufacturing, energy, and service-based employers. Major contributors include companies such as Constellation (1,100 employees), a leading aluminum products manufacturer, and Appalachian Power (approx. 100 employees), along with a range of local healthcare, education, and retail employers. This diverse employment base supports a reliable workforce and consistent demand for essential services, positioning tenants like Fresenius for long-term success.

Education in Ripley is supported by the Jackson County School District, which serves the area with public schools including Ripley Elementary (625 students and faculty), Ripley Middle School (610 students and faculty), and Ripley High School (900 students and faculty). The district benefits from strong community involvement and supports long-term population stability. Additionally, nearby institutions such as West Virginia State University (approx. 46 miles South) and the University of Charleston (approx. 41 miles South) provide higher education and workforce development opportunities, all within a short drive.

Healthcare services in Ripley are supported by Jackson General Hospital (200+ employees, 25 beds), a critical access hospital that provides comprehensive care to the region. The presence of established healthcare infrastructure ensures continued demand for specialized medical services, further reinforcing the strength of the local market. Fresenius' presence in the community addresses a vital and growing need, particularly as demand for dialysis services continues to rise nationwide.

The City of Ripley is well known for its community-driven events and attractions, most notably the annual Mountain State Art & Craft Fair, which draws visitors from across the region. Additional events and recreational amenities, including Cedar Lakes Conference Center and local parks, contribute to the area's quality of life and regional appeal.

One of Ripley's strongest advantages is its proximity to Charleston, the state capital, located approximately 38 miles to the south. Charleston serves as the economic and cultural center of West Virginia, with a diverse economy supported by government, healthcare, education, and energy sectors. Major employers in the region include Charleston Area Medical Center and West Virginia State Government, along with a variety of financial institutions and energy companies. The city also offers a wide range of amenities, including shopping, dining, and entertainment options.

Similarly, Ripley benefits from its proximity to Parkersburg, located approximately 35 miles to the north. Parkersburg's economy is driven by manufacturing, chemicals, and healthcare, with major employers including DuPont and WVU Medicine Camden Clark Medical Center. The accessibility to these larger employment centers enhances Ripley's position as a desirable place to live and work.

In addition to its access to larger metro areas, Ripley is surrounded by several smaller communities that contribute to the region's economic stability and workforce. The combination of regional accessibility, strong employment drivers, and essential healthcare infrastructure makes Ripley a compelling location for investment, particularly for necessity-based tenants like Fresenius that are well-positioned to serve the community for years to come.

Fresenius Medical Care is a leading provider of kidney care services and products, specializing in dialysis treatment for patients with chronic kidney disease and end-stage renal disease. With a global network of approximately 3,600 dialysis centers and serving nearly 300,000 patients worldwide, the company operates one of the largest outpatient dialysis platforms in the world. Its facilities deliver high-quality care with innovation and empathy through kidney care, vascular access care, renal pharmacy, and laboratory and diagnostic services.

Fresenius accepts most major insurance plans, including Medicare and Medicaid, and is equipped with advanced dialysis technology and highly trained clinical staff to deliver efficient, high-quality treatment. In addition to in-center hemodialysis, the provider offers home dialysis training and support services, giving patients flexible treatment options tailored to their medical and lifestyle needs.

Founded in 1996, Fresenius Medical Care has established a strong global presence through decades of growth and expansion, supported by the ongoing and non-discretionary demand for dialysis services. The company's scale, essential healthcare offering, and long-term patient relationships position it as a highly stable, creditworthy tenant within the medical sector.
