LOCATION OVERVIEW

Indianapolis, often referred to as Indy, is the capital and most populous city of the State of Indiana and the seat of Marion County. Indianapolis is situated in the state's central till plain region along the west fork of the White River. The city's official slogan, "Crossroads of America", reflects its historic importance as a transportation hub and its relative proximity to other major North American markets. Indianapolis's transportation infrastructure consists of a complex network that includes a local public bus system, several private intercity bus providers, Amtrak passenger rail service, freight rail lines, major Interstate highways, international airport, a heliport, bikeshare system, 115 miles of bike lanes, and 110 miles of trails and greenways. The four primary highways include: I-65, I-69, I-70 (just 2 miles south of the featured property for convenient access), and I-74. With a dense population of over 272,000 people in 5 miles, high average household income of approximately $95,000 within the same radius, and with 40,000 vehicles per day at N. Keystone Avenue and 38th Street, this asset is truly primed for long-term success.

Indianapolis anchors the 29th largest metropolitan economy in the U.S. Prominent industries include trade, transportation, and utilities; education and health services; professional and business services; government; leisure and hospitality; and manufacturing. The city is home to three professional sports teams, three Fortune 500 companies, five university campuses, and numerous cultural institutions, including the world's largest children's museum that draws over 1.2 million annual visitors (3 miles) and the Indianapolis Zoo with adjoining White River Gardens. Another large event in the city (1.5 miles west on 38th Street) is the Indiana State Fair that draws 800,000 attendees, while the fairgrounds host many other events throughout the year just down the street from the property. Downtown Indianapolis (6 miles), includes the Indiana Convention Center, Lucas Oil Stadium, and over 8,500 hotel rooms in the downtown area.

The city has notable niche markets in amateur sports and auto racing. The city is perhaps best known for hosting the world's largest single-day sporting event, the Indianapolis 500 boasting over 300,000 people on race day. According to the city's destination marketing organization, Indianapolis receives 29.2 million visitors annually, generating $5.6 billion, and supporting 82,900 jobs from the racing industry. The Indianapolis Motor Speedway (8.5 miles) is a National Historic Landmark and the world's largest sports venue by capacity. Beyond its many auto races, Indianapolis hosts numerous other sporting events throughout the year, including the NFL Scouting Combine, the 500 Festival Mini-Marathon, the Circle City Classic, the Monumental Marathon, and the Big Ten Football Championship Game. Indianapolis also regularly hosts the NCAA Division I men's and women's basketball Final Fours. The Indianapolis Colts of the NFL, the Indiana Pacers of the NBA and the Indiana Fever of the WNBA also have large fan bases and are main attractions to the city.

Three Fortune 500 companies are based in the city: insurance company Elevance Health; pharmaceutical company Eli Lilly; and agrochemical company Corteva. Other notable companies based in the city include AES Indiana, Allison Transmission, Barnes & Thornburg, Calumet Specialty Products Partners, CountryMark, Emmis Corporation, Envigo, Finish Line, Herff Jones, Klipsch Audio Technologies, Lids, OneAmerica Financial, Republic Airways Holdings, Simon Property Group, Steak 'n Shake, Sun King Brewing, Wheaton World Wide Moving, and Zipp. Further, the healthcare networks in Indianapolis provide more than 20 hospitals, most belonging to Ascension St. Vincent Health, Community Health Network, and IU Health, all with thousands of employees in the region. Several are teaching hospitals affiliated with the IU School of Medicine or the Marian University College of Osteopathic Medicine. IU Health's Methodist Hospital is located just 4 miles from the featured Walgreens Pharmacy, while Riley Hospital for Children is located just 6.5 miles.

Known worldwide, Amazon has a major presence in the Indianapolis metropolitan area, employing 9,000 people. FedEx employs 7,000 workers across 35 facilities in the city, including FedEx Express's National Hub, which employs 5,800 workers in sorting, distribution, and shipping at Indianapolis International Airport (19 miles southwest). Other logistics companies in the region with large workforces include Ingram Micro and Venture Logistics. Indianapolis anchors one of the largest life sciences clusters in the U.S., notably in the subsectors of drugs and pharmaceuticals and agricultural feedstock and chemicals. Life sciences employs between 21,200 and 28,700 among nearly 350 companies located in the region. Pharmaceutical company Eli Lilly is the city's largest private employer, with a workforce of 11,000 in research and development, manufacturing, and executive administration. Other major employers in the sector include Corteva, Labcorp Drug Development, and Roche's North American headquarters.

Indianapolis ranks among the fastest high-tech job growth areas in the U.S. The metropolitan area is home to 28,500 information technology-related jobs at such companies as Angi, Formstack, Genesys, Hubstaff, Infosys, Ingram Micro, and Salesforce Marketing Cloud. Salesforce has the largest workforce of local tech firms, employing about 2,100 in Indianapolis. Allison Transmission's headquarters and manufacturing facilities, employing 2,500 in the design and production of automatic transmissions and hybrid propulsion systems. Other notable major manufacturing employers include Allegion and RTX Corporation.

The city seems to have a never-ending list of accolades and attributes. Of these, Indianapolis is home to Indiana University (main campus) and Purdue University. IU Indianapolis enrolls approximately 25,000 students, including the main campus of the IU School of Medicine, the largest medical school by enrollment in the U.S. Additionally, Ivy Tech, Butler University and Martin University, are all located in the city. The region also boasts satellite campuses from loads of education systems and the Indianapolis Public Schools is the largest district in the city, enrolling about 23,000 students across 60 schools.
