Lynbrook, NY

- Located on the prestigious South Shore of Nassau County, Long Island, which is one of the most affluent and highly educated markets in the United States.
- The Village of Lynbrook is situated directly between the two highest median income neighborhoods in the market - Rockville Centre ($171,059) & Hewlett ($154,449)
- Nassau County ranks 1st in New York & 10th in the US in median household income, and yields a population density of more than 3,000 people per mile.

The Langdon

Breslin Realty Development Corp. is proud to present The Langdon in Lynbrook, NY. A Breslin joint venture with Fields Grade Development, the Langdon is pivotally located across the street from the Lynbrook train station, a short walk to Village Hall and the Village of Lynbrook's main street, Atlantic Avenue.

Currently under construction, The Langdon will be comprised of a 201-unit upscale, fully amenitized building, including one hundred percent covered parking in the building's garage, concierge services, a health club, outdoor deck with barbeque and garden, a dog run, a dog spa, a co-work space, a lounge, gaming room and roof deck with commanding views. The project will feature studio, one-bedroom, and two-bedroom apartments, as well as an 1,800 square foot café on Broadway.

The site boasts a 30–40-minute train ride to Penn Station or Grand Central Terminal, giving future residents quick access to New York City right from their doorstep.

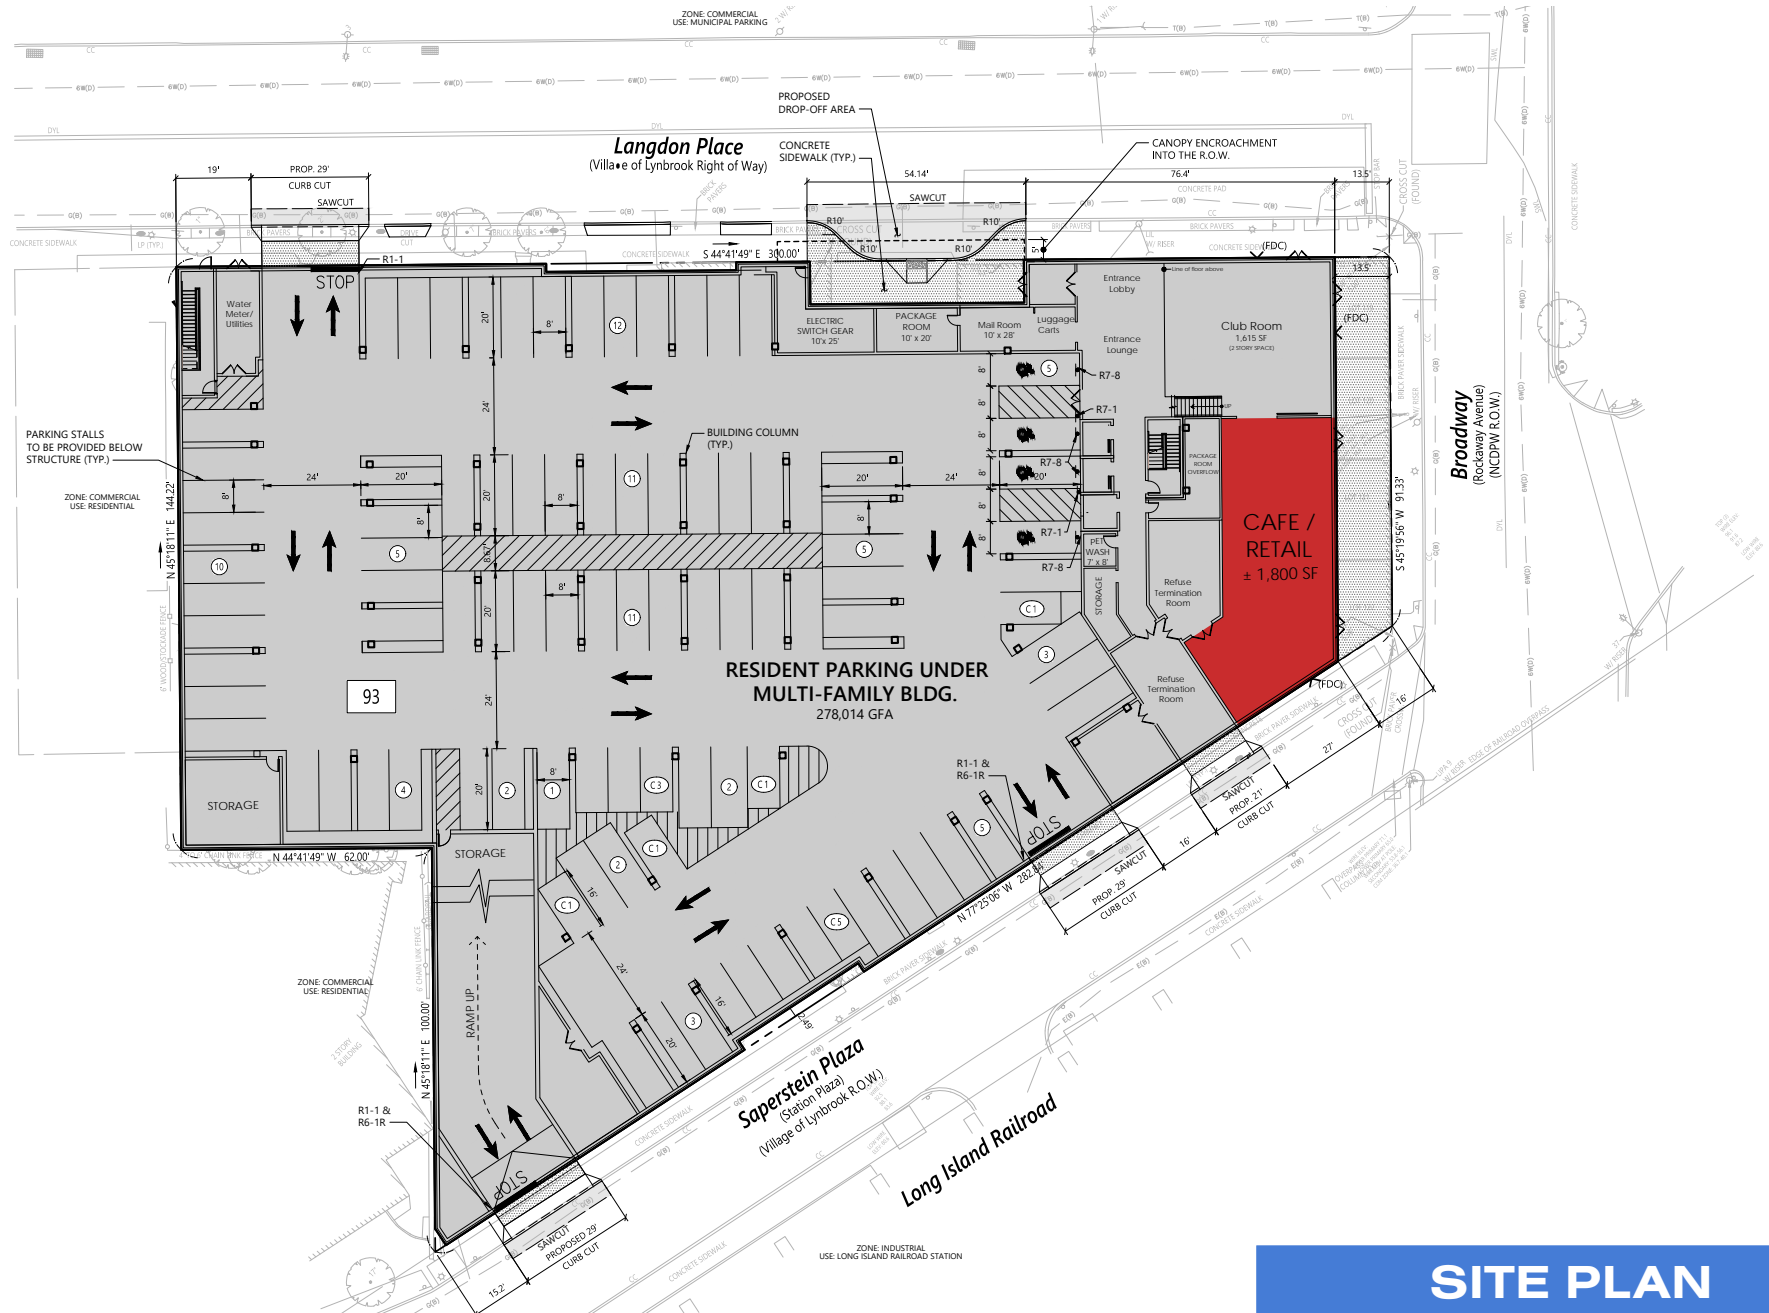

This transformative mixed-use project has been handsomely designed to pay respect to the Village's manufacturing past, while breathing new life and vibrancy into the former Mangrove Feather Factory site at 47 Broadway and the surrounding downtown.

New Lynbrook apartment building rises across from train station

Published May 10, 2024

A six-story apartment building that will bring 201 new apartments across the street from the Lynbrook train station has topped out, with its brick facade set to move into place by the end of July, the project's developers said.

The Langdon, a project developed by Garden City-based Breslin Realty Development Corp. and Hoboken, N.J.-based Fields Grade Development, expects to open for tenants in late spring, early summer 2025, said David Orwasher, Breslin Realty's chief development officer.

The project represents the latest example of transit-oriented development, which involves the creation of mixed-use buildings near transportation to create walkable communities.

The Langdon will have 55 studios, 111 one-bedroom and 35 two-bedroom apartments, as well as an 1,800-square-foot ground-floor restaurant with outdoor seating. The building will have a roof deck, dog spa and dog run area, an outdoor barbecue area, game room and lounge among other amenities, Orwasher said.

The building sits at the intersection of Broadway, Langdon Place and Saperstein Plaza, just steps from the train station, and a short walk to a corridor of restaurants on Atlantic Avenue, the Regal Lynbrook movie theater and Lynbrook Village Hall. The train trip to Penn Station takes about 35 minutes.

Orwasher believes the building will offer high-quality housing options for millennial and Gen Z Long Islanders as well as empty nesters who might otherwise leave the area.

The proximity of The Langdon, a 201-unit apartment building being constructed across from the Lynbrook train station, is expected to open by early 2025.

"I think it's going to contribute significantly to the reinvigoration of the downtown in the village of Lynbrook," he said.

Orwasher said Breslin Realty hasn't set rents for the building yet but he expects rents for studios in the "mid-to-high $2,000s," one-bedrooms in the "mid-$3,000s," and two-bedrooms in the "low-to-mid $4,000s."

Twenty units have been designated as affordable housing with lower rents and will be set aside for people who earn up to 80% of the area median income.

As of June 1, that threshold on Long Island will be $87,500 for an individual and $100,000 for a couple, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD updates the income limits annually. The developer is still finalizing the organization that will coordinate a housing lottery for those units.

Industrial history

Previously, the site had been home to an assemblage of industrial buildings including the long-closed Mangrove Feather Factory and a residential home.

Redeveloping vacant industrial sites can help Long Island communities overcome a shortage of available land to create housing, said Mike Florio, CEO of the Long Island Builders Institute, an Islandia-based trade group.

“We have to look at existing properties that are no longer serving their purpose or function and repurpose them for the future. This is a perfect example of that,” Florio said. “When you look at our train stations here, it’s usually big swaths of parking lots or other properties that are not necessarily the best use for that.”

Florio noted the larger-scale redevelopment that has been proposed in Melville, where the Town of Huntington is considering zoning changes that would allow the conversion of office space into mixed-use buildings with apartments.

Rising cost

In Lynbrook, the developers estimated three years ago the project would cost about $104 million. Orwasher said the final cost will be more, with rising interest rates contributing to the increase, but declined to give an exact number.

The project was required to set aside 10% of its units for affordable housing as part of a package of benefits the Hempstead IDA approved in 2021. The IDA granted $2.4 million in reduced sales and mortgage tax recording fees.

The IDA also agreed to a 30-year payment in lieu of taxes, or PI-LOT, agreement in which the developer will pay an average of about $948,000 in taxes a year. Before the project, the site had generated about $184,000 a year.

Fred Parola, executive director of the Hempstead IDA, said local IDAs have identified a lack of available housing as a problem across Long Island and noted the economic benefit that will come with new residents in the village.

“That many folks added to the downtown Lynbrook area will feed restaurants and existing stores will benefit from a project of this size,” he said.

Polly Talbott, president of the Lynbrook Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber is excited at The Langdon’s potential to bring new businesses to neighboring Broadway. Talbott, who owns a business offering private cooking classes, said she hopes the village will be able to attract a small supermarket or specialty food stores as it adds new tenants downtown.

“Once The Langdon is open, that whole strip on Broadway will be really popular because there’s some great space availability,” Talbott said.

The building will have 205 parking spaces, about one per unit, on its bottom two levels. Orwasher said creating that much parking came at the expense of more space it could lease but was necessary to win support for the project.

Now, the building is about a year away from opening.

Breslin Realty introduces new transit-oriented development – The Langdon

Published May 14, 2024

Breslin Realty Dev. has begun construction for The Langdon in Lynbrook. A Breslin joint venture with Fields Grade Development, The Langdon is located across the street from the Lynbrook train station, a walk to Village Hall and the Village of Lynbrook's main street, Atlantic Ave.

Currently under construction, The Langdon will be comprised of a 201-unit upscale, fully amenitized building, including one hundred percent covered parking in the building's garage, concierge services, a health club, outdoor deck with barbecue and garden, a dog run, a dog spa, a co-work space, a lounge, gaming room and roof deck with views. The project will feature studio, one-bedroom, and two-bedroom apartments, as well as an 1,800 s/f café on Bdwy.

The site has a 30–40-minute train ride to Penn Station or Grand Central Terminal, giving future residents access to New York City.

This transformative mixed-use project has been designed to pay respect to the village's manufacturing past, while breathing new life into the former Mangrove Feather Factory site at 47 Bdwy. and the surrounding downtown.

Lynbrook officials hopeful to raze former Feather Factory to make way for apartments

Developers seek to demolish the former Mangrove Feather factory, on Broadway in Lynbrook as early as next month, and replace it with a $95 million, 201-unit transit-oriented apartment complex dubbed the Langdon Apartments.

It's a project welcomed by Lynbrook mayor Alan Beach. "I'm looking forward to the demolition of the building," he said, "and the new project being started."

Several administrations sought to redevelop the long-vacant factory. After years of trying to convince property owner Barry Singer to sell, Breslin Realty stepped in five years ago with plans to convert the industrial land into a high-density residential complex.

Years of negotiations followed, finally earning village board approval last year.

Breslin has partnered with Fields Grade Development to build a 278,000-square-foot development filled primarily with one-bedroom units. But there will be a handful of studio and two-bedroom apartments as well.

Along with razing the old factory – which has been dormant since 2008 – developers will also tear down a two-family home nearby on Langdon Place as well as a warehouse on Saperstein Plaza.

Construction could take up to two years to complete.
