AREA OVERVIEW

BUENA PARK, CA

One of the things Buena Park citizens are proud of is that Buena Park is considered the center of the southland.

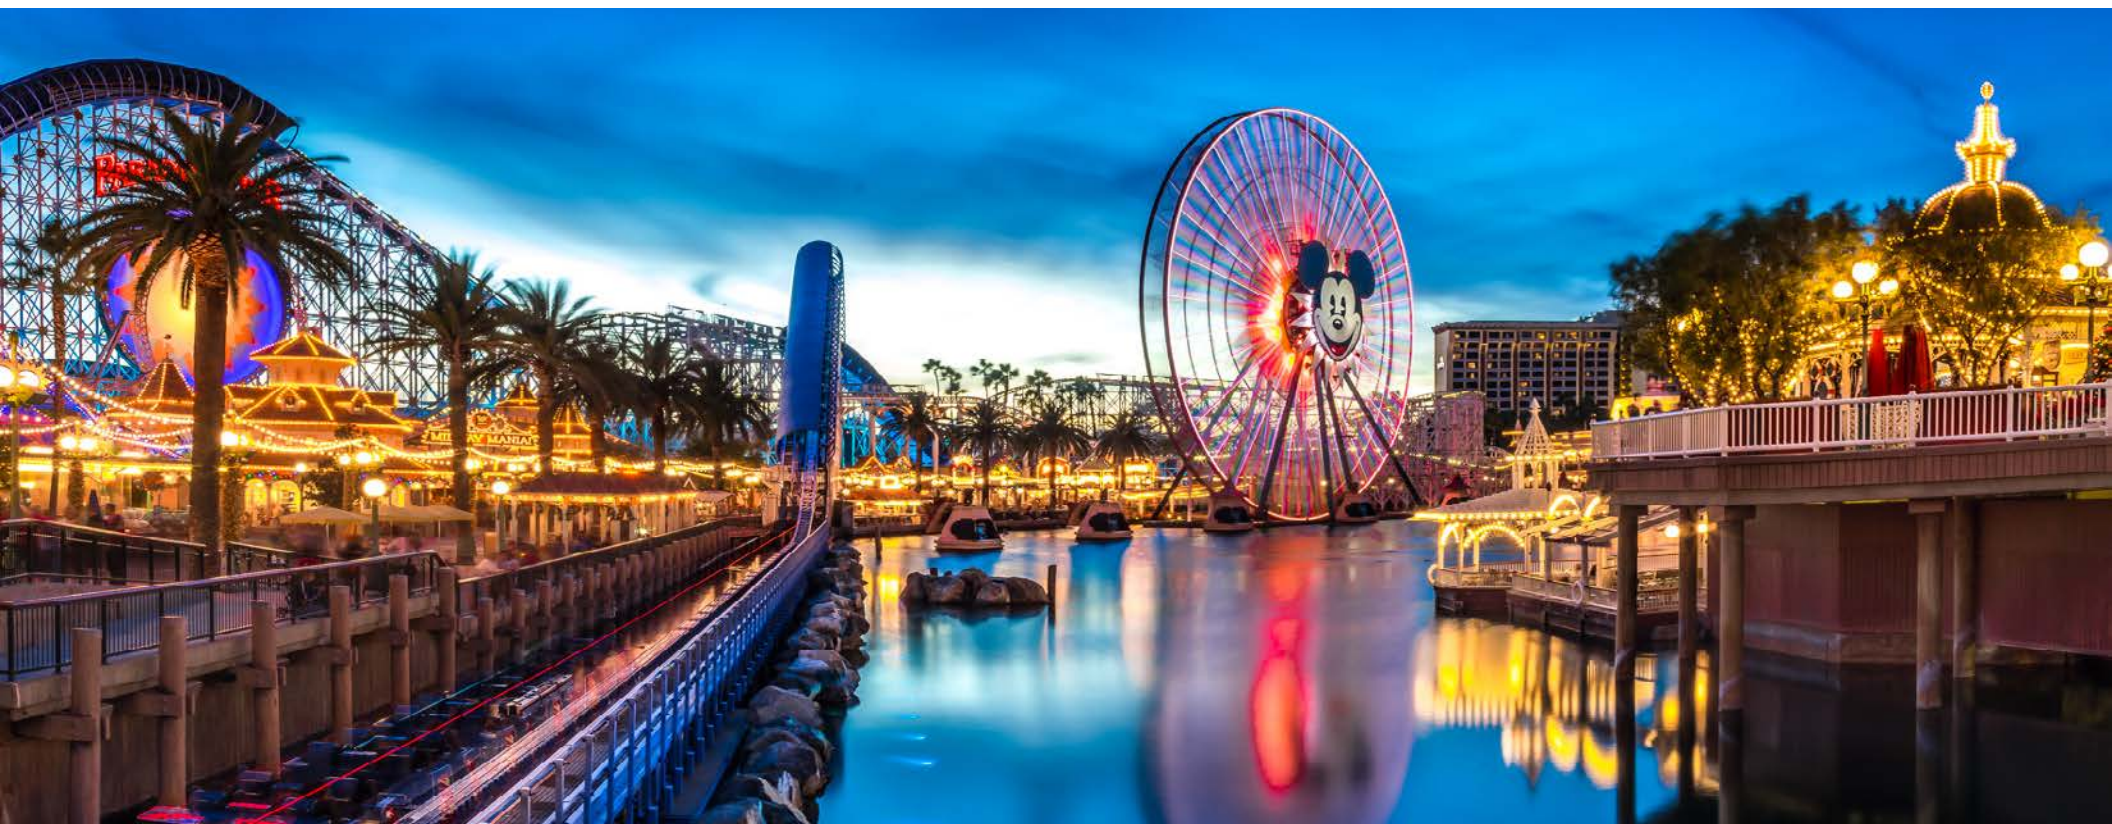

Buena Park is a city in northwestern Orange County, about 12 miles northwest of downtown Santa Ana, the county seat. It is the location of several tourist attractions, including Knott's Berry Farm. It is located about 24 miles southeast of Downtown Los Angeles and is within the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

Buena Park's E-Zone district, located along Beach Boulevard, is home to several well-known tourist destinations: the venerable Knott's Berry Farm theme park, water park Knott's Soak City, Pirate's Dinner Adventure Show, and a Medieval Times dinner show.

The 105-acre Ralph B. Clark Regional Park is one of Orange County's prominent parks. Opened in 1981, it is home to an amphitheater, nature trails, and a stocked fishing pond, as well as the Interpretive Center, a small museum which features ice age fossil and local geology exhibits.

The City of Buena Park has its own local history park on Beach Blvd just south of Interstate 5. On these grounds, the city has preserved several historic buildings.
